Glazed and gorgeous, this new lamp by Boston-based artist Jill Rosenwald shows us what an experienced potter can do with subtle color and an age-old art. Rosenwald first developed the classic Hampton Links pattern to decorate her vases and bowls, but she loves how it looks on the base of this lamp, too. The light fixture's diminutive size makes it perfect for a desk in a cheery space, but given the oval shape of both its body and its shade, I think it would look equally wonderful placed in a bookcase with treasured tomes and collections from afar. Details are everything for the designer, right down to the painted and glazed finial atop the shade. $390. HUDSON, BOSTON, (617) 292-0900, WWW.HUDSON-BOSTON.COM

I've always loved Prairie-Style architecture and design, and my admiration grew after a visit a couple of years ago to Taliesen West, the Arizona site of the Frank Lloyd Wright School of Architecture. Add the fact that, like a lot of homeowners, I'm always looking for ways to revamp my living quarters without undertaking massive renovations and you can see why I'm so enamored of these new cabinet pulls from Reveal Designs. The product of a partnership between the company and the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation, the Taliesen collection is designed by students and faculty of Wright's architecture school. The pulls have the simple, elegant lines that exemplify Wright's design philosophy, and come in stainless steel or a combination of stainless with beech, walnut or oil-rubbed bronze. 6.25-7.25 INCHES. $55-$79. AVAILABLE AT FINE DECORATIVE HARDWARE SHOPS IN MASSACHUSETTS, RHODE ISLAND AND CONNECTICUT. VISIT WWW.REVEAL-DESIGNS.COM FOR DEALER LOCATIONS.

The MTV show Jersey Shore may give the Garden State a bad name, but the opposite is true for the Jersey chair, one of the newest designs from furniture maker Quentin Kelley. I've been following Kelley's work for the past year or so; he was one of our 5 Under 40 winners in 2010. At his Milton, Massachusetts, studio, Kelley crafts beautiful, made-to-order modern furniture that looks deceptively simple but is actually quite innovative in its approach. According to Kelley, the design for the Jersey chair, shown here in maple, was based on an Italian-made "classic modern" dining chair, but with some of his own modifications. Ever-so-slightly tapered legs and visible joinery details keep the design from feeling staid, while the gently curved back invites lingering long after the meal is over. 21 x 21 x 39 INCHES. $3,500.
